If we we have not come together for the recovery of lay and gratulation; is it that evening. Almost at the moment for organizing the meeting, it had to be adjourned to the Atheneum, which was soon white race, and the establishment of nefilled in all its parts. The meeting was gro despotisms over ten states of the called to order by E. B. Eshelman, Secre-

and this is an assembly of sober, thoughtful men.

As preliminary to the duty to which you have assigned me, you will not deem it obtrustive. If I invoke your carnest and interested attention to the subjects likely to be offered to your thoughts.

In the short national history our country has made-evidently in all its progress under the favor of a benignant Providence there have been more than one or two epachs which men have called crises—they were occasions which awakened, and not without reason, thefears and auxietiesofs agacious, considerate and patriotic men.

But has there been atime, fellow-citizens, since the foundations of this Government were laid, when the light of Liberty was so obscured by shadow and clouds—when our sunlit way of American freedom was illumined so dimly, as in this hour? When the great broad, fundamental interests and weliare of this hitherto favored people were so associated with conditions of danger—as at this hour? We trow not.

There are two ways—and so the lessons of national experience t—ach us allong the ages—there are two ways in which free institutions are ordelied, and the ugly front of despotism reared on their ruins.

The other mode—none the less effectual under, auspicious conditions, is that emure in the proper in the result may be doubtful. Order is breaking into chaos. Wrong is trumphant. Corruption sits enthroned in power; and more dangerous than all, the disorders which threaten them. Every evil can be guarded against; every crime can be punished, except that of suicide; for if the people desire to destroy themselves, they have the power to do so, and there is neither preventative, nor cure. This, then of Ohio! is the issue you are called upon to deeded. If crushed, it will be by your own votes. For if bent upon your own degree-dual to being free, you wish to surfuse, you have the power to do so.

Ten great States who gave to our country and mankind, Washingtor, Jefferson, Madison, a Marshall, a Henry, a Monroe, a Morgan, a Sumpter, and a long leatilogue of great names of those who offered treasure, blood and life to secure the freedom of their country! The people of these States—conquered, disarmed, submissive, helpless—our countrymen, our brethres, helrs with as to a common patrimony of freedom, such as never tell to any If the negro is capable of self-govern-ment; if the white and black races can live together on terms of equality, then, but not otherwise, is he entitled to all the rights of a citizen. Now, my countrymen, let us consider this subject with the sole desire of attaining the truth, so that we may act upon it with the good sense which should characterize a people who believe themselves to be capable of self-govern-

This question is severely practical. In mony of freedoin, such as never tell to any ruce or tibe or people—ly now with the iron heel of a Brigadier on their necks, and his battalions of bayonets at his back.

Such is the beginning. Such the approach of the Rubicon—shall it be passed?

This question is severely practical. In our townships are we willing to have negro justices of the peace? In our courts do we desire negro jurors and negro judges? And shall we follow the example of Massachusetts, and send negroes to the State Legislature? and shall Onio achieve Such is the beginning. Such the approach of the Rubicon—shall it be passed?

Then turn your eye to your Congress at your seat of Government. The Brigadiers are not there—but mark other "signs of the times." See you any stealthy processes by which the chains of power are encircling your limbs? Do you discern how step by step, steathy steps, in rapid succession, we are likely to exemplify a solemn truth which our ancestors well understood and strove to impress upon their posterity, when they affirmed, often and again, "Power is always stealing from the posterity. when they affirmed, often and again, "Power is always stealing from the grain, "Power is always stealing from the grain, "Look at the thousands of millions of debt, thousands of millions from being a Senator of the United States; and who can doubt that within a very few of millions of debt, thousands of millions intaxed debt in the hands of the few—at two thousand banks, money corporations, irresponsible agents, add to these the auxiliary measure and influences by which this extraordinary power is cherished and sustained, and consider!

And rew, my countrymen, have you trusty sentinels on the watch tower? And are you calling to them, at shortest intervals, "Watchman, what of the night?" or do we sleep in fancied security, pleasing ourselves with the imagination—"All's well?"

Irrom being a Senator of the United Strates; and who can doubt that within a very few months it will be our business to welcome a colored Senator on this floor?" "I cannot doubt it."

Now, if it be true that the negro is the equal of the white man, you are bound in common honesty to go still further. Not content with negro voters, jurors, justices of the peace and negro Senators as promised by Mr. Sumner, and a negro Vice Presdent as promised by Mr. Wendell Phillips; you must invite the negro to your table, revently the content with negro voters, jurors, justices of the peace and negro Senators as promised by Mr. Wendell Phillips; you must invite the negro to your table, revently the content with negro voters, jurors, justices of the peace and negro Senator on this floor?" "I cannot doubt it."

wais. "Watchman, what of the night?" or do we sheep in sancied security, pleasing ourselves with the imagination—"All's well?"

but I may not detain you from the voice of a friend who will speak to you of these topics as I can not speak.

To him you will listen as to one who speaks of that which he knows, and testifies of that which he has seen. His duties as as Representative in Congress bring him into relations with public men and affairs which enable him to reveal to ne seemilal truths we might not otherwise attain. Then, we are authorized to believe what be shall say to us. There flows in his veins the blood of a magnanimous snees try, who loved and bled for the liberties of our country in the day that "tried men's souls." If was a Morgan—that same Morgan that met Tarleton at Cowpens—who, at the sound of the British cannon at Concord and Lexington, flew as on the wings of the wind, with his brave Virginis mountaineers—to the help of the playing who had an humble spoke in the winder—and needed aid. Now, mark the vicissitudes of time! But the other day the sound sord in English whence salied forth the warrior Morgan and his brave comrades to the glaies, valleys and gorges of these sand list, whence salied forth the warrior Morgan and his brave comrades to the saeitsance of their northern brothers.

But times change and men change with time.

1776 was our day and hour of light and glory—when men "drank the spirit of a golden day, triumphed in existance," and 1867 is—wever you shall make it, my countrymen.

Atter, the cheering had subsided Mr. Miller added: And now gentlemen I have the honor of introducing to you Gen. George (Washington Morgan.)

the negro slave in Carolina was the superior of the negro king in Congo, for to a limited degree he had improved during his resihonor of introducing to you Gen. George dence of eight generations in America.

It was not slavery, but nature which made the black man inferior to the white. Gen. Morgan, addressing the President of the meeting, said:

Nenerable and respected sir: Right glad am I to have the honor of addressing a meeting of my fellow-citizens, presided over by a son of the grand old Commonwealth, which gave birth to Washington and Jefferson—a son of old Virginia, the mother of attesmen and of States.

For what purpose, men of Ohio! have we assembled here to-night? To celebrate some great victory achieved by our arms?

No: for we are at peace with the world; and more than two years have been added to the past, since the last gun was fired in the great Contederate war. Only two gun shots distance separate the coast of Africa from that of Europe, and yet what a moral infinity divides the one from the other. From the creation of its inhabitants the growth of the condinents, so is it with the isles of the seas. The white man dominates the work.

MAY NOT COLOR BE THE EFFECT OF CLIyet what a moral infinity divides the one from the other. From the creation of its inhabitants, the greater portion of Africa has been sunk in savagism, without one ray of civilization to soften the monotonous gloom. Tyre, Egypt, Carthage were the homes of fair skinned races of men, who attained a high civilization; but south of the deserts there always has been barbaric darkness. On one side of the straits of Gibraltar, religion, the arts and sciences flourish, while to the southward of the opposite shore, heathenism is supreme; the Christian's God is unknown, and the most enlightened of the negro kings commemorates his birthday by bathing in a pool of human blood.

According to Lord Brougham, one fact is worth a cargo of theories, and not one uncontroverted fact has ever been cited to show that color among the races of men, is the result of climate.

I have heard well meaning persons assert that the negroes of the United States, without reference to a mixtare of blood, were growing whiter, and that the change was the effect of climate. But these good people forget that if the climate of America can effect any change in the complexion of the negro, that the negro ought to be turning red instead of white, for red, and not white, is the color of the natives of America. Europeans have resided in in physical strength.

At length peace was made on the basis of separation. The island was divided; the negroes on one half. the mulators on the other. And what of the black Republic? It became a Republic ruled by an Emperor. Republican which will not be controverted. In Jerestit to the state of the subject by quoting an authority which will not be controverted. Africa.

This, my countrymen, is not a question of mere speculative philosophy, but one of stern and practical reality, a question which no statesman should disregard.

If it be true that the negro is incapable of self-government, shall we deliberately confer upon four million of blacks, rights they cannot comprehend, and privileges they cannot safely exercise?

Do you believe, my friends, that the black and white races can live togéther in the same country on terms of equality?

That is, good can no more be done by those who are accustomed to do evil, than can the Ethiopean change his skin, or the correctness of this interpretation, when it is considered that God was denouncing judgment against his people for their wickedness. And in the next verse they cannot safely exercise?

the same country on terms of equality? If you do so believe, permit me to invite your attention to the opinions of some of the most emineut of American statesmen. You are all a ware that Jefferson and Madison, as well as Clay and Lincoln, deprecated the existence of slavery, and that they all declared that the kings of England, and not the people of the United States,
were responsible for its existence. Mr.
Jefferson said: "I regard nothing as being more certain in the future than that slavery mill be abolished but it is not less certain You are all a ware that Jefferson and Madwill be abolished, but it is not less certain all the privileges we enjoy? would probably never end but in the extermination of the one race or the other."

Similar views were entertained and expressed by Madison and Clay, and were afterwards indorsed by Abraham Lincoln. In his reply to Judge Douglas, in the Ottawa debate, Mr. Lincoln said (see debates page 74) "What next? Free the blacks, and make them socially and politically our equals? My own feelings will not admit of this; and if mine would, we all know that those of the great mass of the people would not; whether this feeling accords with justice and sound judgment is not the sole question, if indeed it is any part of it. A universal feeling whether well or ill founded cannot safely be disregarded. We cannot then make them our equals."

And like sentiments were proclaimed by Mr. Lincoln in his debates from Lake Michigan to the Ohio river. In his speech at Charleston (Debates, page 136), he forcibly said. "I am not now ever have here in the content of the same locality, or descended from the same parents. For a moment, consider, my friends, the beautiful harmony of nature. AND WHAT OF HAYTI?

Let us for a moment, my friends, leave the negro in Africa, and glance at his condition on the beautiful island of Hayti, where, under the auspices of mulattoes who had been educated in Paris, he attempted to establish a Negro Republic, based upon the ideas of the French Revolution. The mulattaes combined with the pure pagroes annestors landed on our shores centuries. mulattoes combined with the pure negroes to extirpate the white race, who formed but a small minority of the population. A war of races followed, and the whites fled from the island, or were exterminated.

But the war of races had only commenced. The mulatto, who had hair on his head and the blood of the white man in his yeins despised the negro, who had his veins, despised the negro, who had of France, will tell you that there is to be neither. And on his side the negro hated found the beautiful Greek type in form the mulatto, because he was no longer and feature, as clearly marked as in anblack. War ensued. The mulattoes were cient Thebes, or Athens, or Sparta and yet in the minority, but their superior intelligence gave them the advantage over the the Greek colonists, from whom the Arnegroes, although the latter excelled them lesians sprung, first landed on what is

Hon. C. L. Vallandigham's Appointments.

I must close. My duty is done. I have sought to investigate this grave question with fairness, and to discuss it with candor. Study and reflection have strengthblack races can never live together the terms of equality; and I repeat what I terms of equality; and I repeat what I declared two years ago, when I received the standard of the great Democratic party of Ohio—I am opposed to negro suffrage in Ohio or in the South, now, or at any future time, or under any circumstances whatever.
